Dear Fellow Bearkats,

This issue of the

magazine is a special one, because it gives us the opportunity to recognize and thank those who have meant so much to making Sam Houston State University the outstanding educational institution that it is and the better one that we all want it to be.

In this issue we list those who have given money or in-kind contributions to the University. I believe you will be truly impressed, as I am, at just how many there are and just how much they care.

We have also highlighted people like Charles and Ann Mallery (page 4), Miriam and Meredith York (page 6), and Mildred Reed Hancock (page 7) who have been especially generous.

There are many who also serve Sam Houston State University well and bring great honor to our University simply by doing what they do best. One such individual is Dr. Thaksin Shinawatra (back cover), prime minister of Thailand, who is the fourth recipient of the Sam Houston Humanitarian Award.

The Sam Houston Humanitarian Award was created in 1993 in honor of the 200th anniversary of the birth of American statesman and Texas hero Sam Houston.

Selection criteria include evidence of the same qualities exhibited by Sam Houston, including responsible and distinguished leadership and service; notable contributions to humanity; record of civic and cultural involvement; pursuit of educational and scholarly quests; and empowerment of others toward equality for humankind.

Previous recipients included James A. Baker, former President George Bush, and Lech Walesa.

We feel that Dr. Thaksin Shinawatra is an especially worthy recipient of this award.

After earning his degree at Sam Houston State University in 1979, Dr. Thaksin returned to his country to establish a successful business and to work for the betterment of an entire country. His commitment to education alone was justification for his being awarded this recognition, as he is establishing a new university in Thailand that is being funded primarily by his private contributions.

We are so proud of people like the Mallerys, the Yorks, Mrs. Hancock and the Shinawatra family, and to everyone else whose names appear in this publication, who make philanthropic and professional contributions to the fiscal well-being and enhanced reputation of Sam Houston State University. Thank you so much for all that you do.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dr. James F. Gaertner, 12th President of Sam Houston State University
The Mallerys’ roots run deep in Huntsville, and their love for Sam Houston State University runs even deeper - a love recently underscored by a six-figure endowment fund established by Charles and Ann Mallery.

The Ann Crump and Charles T. Mallery Scholarship Endowment is a collaborative effort made possible by a commitment of the Mallerys along with an ExxonMobil Foundation and J. P. Morgan Chase Foundation matching gifts program.

“We want to make a positive impact on the lives of young people,” said Charles, “and this endowment allows us to fulfill that goal while giving us the opportunity to work with young people and give back to Sam Houston, a University that has given so much to me and Ann, and to our families.”

Charles and Ann Mallery both grew up in Huntsville, where getting a higher education was “all in the family,” each with several family members with bachelor’s and master’s degrees from Sam Houston State University. Even more impressive is that both Charles’ and Ann’s mothers had higher education degrees, which was quite a feat in the early part of the twentieth century when most women were needed to stay home.

But the Mallerys were no such family, nor were the Crumps. Demonstrating that everyone has a right to and a need to acquire an education, both Charles’ and Ann’s parents and grandparents encouraged their children to attend college and continue their higher learning process. “My father, W. P. Mallery, Jr., was general manager of Mallery/Smither Chevrolet Dealership, and one of his main focuses was to encourage his employees to finish their college degrees,” explained Charles. “In fact, he felt so strongly about it that he would even help them financially to achieve their goals.”

With a mother with a master’s degree from SHSU, two brothers with SHSU degrees and a sister who attended Sam Houston, Charles - who earned his BBA from SHSU in 1959 - obviously first received encouragement to obtain a higher education in his home, particularly from his mother, Maurine Hardy Mallery, who reared four children alone after the loss of her husband.

Ann’s families were not much different. Her grandfather was John R. Landers, building and grounds superintendent for Sam Houston back in the 30s and 40s. With his family’s homestead close to what is now the Lowman Student Center, Landers enjoyed watching his six daughters graduate from SHSU. Ann’s mother, Jessie Pearl Landers Crump, earned several degrees from Sam Houston.

“Our families have been connected to Sam Houston State University for three generations and for more than two centuries,” said Ann, who graduated from SHSU in 1958 with a bachelor’s degree in English. “This scholarship fund is our way of honoring our families’ long-standing relationship with Sam Houston State.”

Charles is retired from ExxonMobil and is a member of a pioneer Walker County family, and Ann is retired from Chase Bank, and their families’ heritage is integrally linked with ranching. Such a combination of business and agriculture led to the focus of the scholarship endowment, which will offer $5,000 annually to undergraduate(s) majoring in Agricultural Sciences and another $5,000 annually to graduate student(s) in the College of Business Administration’s MBA program in Agribusiness.

While the agricultural sciences major already exists, the master’s program in Agribusiness is new to SHSU. The Mallerys explained that this “first” is particularly important as it aims to teach ag students the importance of running their enterprises like a business, something that is sometimes lacking in the farming and ranching arena. Also, agribusiness prepares students for employment in banking, business management, extension education, agriscience education, and many other fields related to business and economics. “In today’s competitive market place,” added Charles, “it is critical to have a higher level of business expertise as well as a solid foundation of agricultural sciences knowledge.”

Such generosity like the Mallerys’ does not go unnoticed by the University. SHSU President James F. Gaertner commented that it’s the generosity of friends like Charles and Ann that allows SHSU the opportunity to grow and expand its educational offerings. “Charles and Ann’s love of this University is well-known and appreciated more than they know,” said Gaertner. “It’s friends and donors like the Mallerys who help us continue our tradition of offering quality education programs to students who have a need, who have a dream, and who don’t mind a little hard work along the way. That’s the way Charles and Ann did it, and this legacy ensures that others have the same opportunity.”

A member of the President’s Circle, a member of the SHSU Alumni Advisory Board, a board member of the Katpack Football Booster Club and recipient of a 2000 SHSU Alumni Service Award, Charles has enjoyed numerous awards over the years that honor both his professionalism as well as his and Ann’s giving spirit. To name just a few, he is a charter member of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity where he was an advisor for years and earned the Distinguished Service Chapter Award, which has only been presented in Texas 15 times since 1858. Moreover, he and Ann initiated the establishment of the Esquire/Delta Tau Delta Endowment Fund, which was also made possible through matching corporate gifts and gifts from friends.

Ann, also a member of the SHSU Alumni Association, was a charter member of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, and along with being a respected businesswoman, is highly regarded as a devoted wife, mother and grandmother. Together she and Charles have three children: Marc (and his wife Marla), Penn, and Dyan (and her husband Todd). They are particularly proud of their first grandchild, Mallery, Dyan and Todd’s daughter.

Considering their devotion to higher education, Charles and Ann are especially proud that all their children have earned college degrees. Marc is a graduate of Texas Tech, Dyan graduated from A&M University and also attended SHSU, and Penn attended Texas Wesleyan, Texas Tech and Sam Houston.

“Our family has a strong tradition of believing in and supporting higher education. We feel that this university was established for no other purpose than to prepare young people to lead productive lives after graduation, and we’re very proud to be a part of that effort,” Charles explained.

Ann added, “We believe in giving back - giving back to the community, to our university and to our church. And we hope that by giving our time, our services, and our resources, we’re helping make a positive difference in the lives of young people.”

Miriam York Honors Her Husband and SHSU with Generous Gift

Education was their life. Both retired teachers and educators, together Miriam York and her late husband Meredith York racked up more than 75 years of service to the Texas educational system.

So how fitting it is that they have given back to the educational system that brought them so much joy in life, and specifically to Sam Houston State University, which has benefited from numerous York gifts, most recently a $300,000 endowment fund, the Miriam and Meredith York Presidential Endowment for Excellence.

“We never had any children of our own. Our children were the thousands that we came in contact with while teaching and working in the educational system,” Miriam explained. “When I sold the farm, which was actually Meredith's family farm, I thought, 'what better way to share our good fortune than to give it to Sam.' I told the president, Dr. Gaertner, that that's what Meredith would have wanted.”

The farm is actually the Y Bar Ranch, which Meredith's grandfather established in Lee County in 1865. That ranch later helped send Meredith to what was then known as Sam Houston State Teachers' College, where he graduated in 1935 with a bachelor of science degree in education.

Later, Meredith earned a master's degree from the University of Houston, where he met Miriam, who earned both bachelor's and master's degree from UH. “I did attend Sam Houston once,” she said, “I earned my counselor's certification there.”

Miriam continued, “Meredith dearly loved this University. He and I both had a hard time going through college, and we both knew how much it would have meant if we'd had a little help along the way. Maybe through this endowment and our other gifts, we can help other young people obtain their college degrees and lead productive lives.”

The ‘other gifts’ Miriam refers to are the numerous donations that she and her late husband have given to the University over the years, now totaling more than a half million dollars. “In many ways we have been blessed. We know students today have a rough time, and while we don't have a lot to offer, we wanted to help how we could.”

One significant advantage of the endowment fund is that it can be used however the SHSU President and his staff see fit, ensuring that University needs are met when they arise. Dr. James Gaertner, president of SHSU noted, “This gift is wonderful. Often times there are complex restrictions placed on monies provided the University, which can make it more challenging to ensure the funds are used where the need is greatest. But with Mrs. York's blessing, we'll make sure that the funds are used to support the students and academic needs of Sam Houston, and our intent is to make her even more proud of this University.”

Dr. Gaertner continued, “I have had the honor of meeting with Mrs. York several times now, and she is indeed a special lady with a generous heart and amazing devotion to education. Sam Houston is privileged to have her, and her late husband, among our friends.”

FOR MILDRED HANCOCK, DREAMS DO COME true - IF YOU WORK HARD ENOUGH

She was 32 with four small children, living in Nacogdoches - with a dream. A dream to finish her college education, one that she had started at Sam Houston State University many years before.

So with a lot of courage and a $25 weekly allowance from her husband, who stayed behind to work and maintain their home, Mildred Hancock moved to Huntsville to live out her dream.

With no car, no telephone and no television, Mildred did what many young people today could probably never muster the courage and strength to do. She finished her bachelor of science degree in library science in two years, covering three years of work during that time - all while being a full-time mother of four.

“It was hard, but I enjoyed it,” she said. “My husband came on weekends, but during the week I did everything myself. We walked everywhere we went, we somehow managed to get by on $25 a week for groceries and clothing expenses, and still we had a good time.”

Mildred said that at first she was scared. She even thought that the 18-year-olds - the typical age of many of her classmates - might be embarrassed by her. But that didn't sway her, and she found that her classmates were very accepting of - and probably even inspired by - her.

“It’s so much harder now, and maybe with the scholarship and endowment fund, students who are like I was - raising a family but wanting to finish their college degree - will be able to fulfill their dream like I did,” she explained.

Incidentally, Mildred didn't stop at a bachelor’s degree. She later went on to earn two master’s degrees while working full time. At one time, she also was experiencing health problems. In fact, her doctor was so impressed with Mildred's educational accomplishments and her fighting spirit, that in his new office he recently dedicated one room as the Millie Hancock Education Center.

Quite an accomplishment for what once was a young mother with just a dream - and a lot of courage!
SHSU Annual Fund Continues its Streak of Success

Three years ago, Sam Houston State University started down a path of uncharted territory, trying its hand at establishing a new giving program, an Annual Fund campaign.

As many know by now, the Annual Fund is an annual giving campaign managed by the Office of University Advancement with the specific purpose of raising funds to meet specific needs of the University.

The Annual Fund provides SHSU with critical funds that bridge the gap between actual educational costs and tuition income. More to the point, Annual Fund gifts have a tremendous impact on the University’s ability to support programs not funded by state appropriations.

“Gifts through the Annual Fund help provide additional funds for student scholarships, equipment, faculty enrichment and innovative programs that prepare our students for a future that will make the entire Sam Houston State community proud,” explained Cindy Truax, assistant director of development.

She noted that the goal is to increase overall giving to the University by providing a means for each and every SHSU friend to participate. “The university appreciates every donation, and we’re proud to provide our alumni and friends another avenue for giving,” said Truax.

Demonstrating that the Annual Fund is succeeding in achieving that goal, last year total number of gifts to the University had a 50 percent increase. Moreover, the faculty and staff have united with SHSU alumni and friends, participating in the Faculty/Staff Annual Fund campaign where there was a 20 percent increase in giving over the previous year.

In moving the Annual Fund forward, Truax announced that Sam Houston began its first-ever Phonathon Campaign just last month. While direct solicitations are mailed throughout the year to alumni requesting that they participate in the Annual Fund program, the Phonathon offers a more personal connection with them.

“The purpose of the Phonathon is two-fold,” explained Truax. “We want to reconnect - or connect for the first time - personally with our alumni to let them know about current developments and programs at SHSU. Using the telephone also allows us to engage in a dialogue and tell them about the Annual Fund program, giving them a chance to participate at whatever level they can.”

To make the Phonathon even more effective, students - the very ones who will ultimately benefit from Fund gifts - are making the calls. They are the “Kat Kallers,” manning the phones every Sunday through Thursday with calling hours of 5:30 to 9:00 p.m.

“I’m really excited about this program,” she said. “We’ve hired Christa Ashworth-Perkins as our Phonathon manager. She is responsible for managing the telephone solicitation program that will help us connect with our alumni.”

“I’m really proud of the Annual Fund Program’s success thus far,” concluded Truax. “Annual gifts are helping to assure a stronger future for Sam Houston State University.”

Two New ‘Advancement’ Faces Join the SHSU Team

Christa Ashworth-Perkins recently began her career at Sam Houston, following a family tradition. Perkins has been named manager of the Annual Fund Phonathon program, where she is responsible for managing telephone solicitations as well as supervising the student callers.

Prior to joining SHSU, Ashworth-Perkins worked for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in Huntsville for almost three years before moving with her husband to Oregon where she worked for the University of Oregon and later in the health insurance industry.

Returning to Huntsville was returning home for Ashworth-Perkins. She graduated from Sam Houston with her bachelor of arts degree in 1994. While in school, she worked in the Art Department, the Communications Department and for the President’s Office. Moreover, her mother has worked for SHSU for 16 years. Now, both Ashworth-Perkins and her husband have joined the SHSU staff.

Ginger Harrell also continues a family tradition as she joins the Sam Houston family. Harrell was recently named Data Records Coordinator where she is responsible for updating and maintaining database records for the Office of University Advancement, as well as performing data analysis.

Before joining Sam Houston, Harrell worked for the Huntsville-Walker County Chamber of Commerce as an administrative assistant and then as a program coordinator. She also worked as an administrative technician for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

Having attended Sam Houston in the past and now being a part of the SHSU staff, Harrell joins her father who has taught at SHSU for 33 years in the Department of Agricultural Sciences.

Throughout our lives, the greatest gifts we have are our friends. This is no different at Sam Houston State University. We want to take a moment and celebrate our friends and benefactors, individuals, corporations, foundations and organizations, for their generous support.

The impact of Annual Fund giving during the past two years can already be felt at the University. Our Honor Roll of Donors continues to grow, paving the way for Sam Houston to continue offering outstanding educational programs for our students. As these students embark on their career paths, they take the knowledge and skills they learn at SHSU with them into their futures - futures where they are able to thrive and succeed because of your generous gifts to this University. Their success is the fruit of your harvest and the 'return' on your investment.

So to all of you who have shared your good fortune with Sam Houston, believing in our ability to help shape the hearts and minds, and ultimately the futures, of those who grace our doors: Thank you. Thank you for giving what you can, for caring all you can, and for being our friends. We are truly grateful for every gift, every friend.

Where would Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra be without Sam Houston State University?

The success of a student may well be the most enduring and significant return from your gift – large or small – to Sam Houston State University.

Join thousands of alumni, staff, faculty and friends in supporting the academic excellence of SHSU. Your contribution will create limitless opportunities through higher education.

You can give with a credit card, write a check, give property or stocks, or even include Sam Houston State in your estate plans.

Thank you for your support. Each and every gift is vital to the continuing excellence of Sam Houston State University.
